Non-EU pre-university studies

If you have completed your pre-university education in a country that is not a member of the European Union, Andorra, China, Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway or Switzerland and want to begin your undergraduate studies at a Spanish university, you must do the following:

1. Validate your pre-university studies before the Spanish Ministry of Education
2. Pass the Spanish university entrance exams

How to validate your pre-university studies

You can validate your pre-university studies at the Ministry of Education, at a Provincial Government Office, or at a Spanish embassy or consulate in your home country.

More details about the validation procedure on the website of the Spanish Ministry of Education (website in Spanish).

Spanish university entrance exams

Once you have your validation certificate, you must complete the Spanish university entrance exams through the UNED, the Spanish National Distance Education University. Click here to learn about registering for the exams on the UNED's website (website in Spanish).

Contact information for the UNED:

Website: www.uned.es

Telephone: +34913 98 60 00 / +34913 98 66 00

E-mail address: selectue@admi.uned.es

However, if your pre-university studies are validated as an advanced technical diploma (Título de Técnico Superior), you will not have to complete the Spanish university entrance exams. Nonetheless, you may still want to do the specific phase of the university entrance exams, which will account for the remaining 4/14th of your final mark.

Pre-enrolment at the University of Granada

Once you have passed the Spanish university entrance exams, you can pre-enrol at the University of Granada following the standard procedure. You must have the documents that prove you have passed the university entrance exams and have validated your pre-university studies.

Admission priority is determined by two factors: 1) when you apply and 2) your final mark.

Priority is first given to those students who submit their pre-enrolment application in the first phase of the admissions procedure. This first phase is usually in mid-July.

The second factor that determines priority is your final mark, which is calculated according to the mark that appears in your validation certificate and the mark that you have obtained in the university entrance exams. Both of these marks must be a pass or higher, a pass being 5/10.

Note that the subjects that are more directly related the degree you want to apply for (as specified by the university) have a higher weight in the formula that is used to calculate the entrance mark for each specific undergraduate degree.

The formula is the following:

Entrance mark = $(0.6 \times \text{mark on validation certificate}) + (0.4 \times \text{mark obtained on the general phase}) + (a \times M1) + (b \times M2)$

- The mark that appears on your validation certificate and the mark obtained on the general phase of the Spanish university entrance exams account for 10/14th of your final mark
- M1 and M2 are the two best marks given in the specific phase of the university

entrance exams, accounting for the remaining 4/14th of your final mark - a and b are the multiplication weights that are specific to each degree, and they vary from 0.1 to 0.2, as established by the university to which you apply

Remember that your mark must be a pass (5/10 in the Spanish education system) or higher in order to be included in the formula.
